Ted Olson Spence Vanderlinden Public Official Award

Ted Olson has been an active member of the American Public Power Association for three decades. Since 1978, he has served as an appointed member of the Ephraim City Utility Board. Ted is a staunch advocate for public power and is heavily involved in the Ephraim City community as a professor at Snow College and as Ephraim City's representative to Intermountain Power Agency, which operates two generating units in Utah.

What is the one best contribution a governing board or council member can make to the utility and the community?

TED: "Ensuring the most reliable electric service at the lowest cost should be the overarching goal for all of public power. This requires carefully balancing politics, regulation, and technology, all of which have become more complex in recent years. No one person can be an expert in all of these areas. Therefore, it is imperative that boards and councils surround themselves with the most talented experts available and trust their recommendations. Trust can create a synergy of productivity. Trusting others does not mean shying away from tough questions, issues, or becoming informed. It does require recognizing your own limitations."
